FOX NEWS LIVE REPORT

Aired on WLUK-TV

Thursday, January 14, 2010 – 9:08am to 9:17am

Live from the White House, President Obama's statement concerned the U.S. help being sent to aid Haiti. He indicated recovery from this disaster will require all resources. Our leaders in government tell us their plans and action to help Haiti. The first wave of troops from the U.S. are now in Haiti. We've secured the airport. Our priority is the safety of Haitian Americans.

The Lambeau tax: Part 1

- Reporter: Robert Hornacek

It's been nearly a decade since voters approved a half percent sales tax for the renovation of Lambeau Field . But we aren't just paying for the stadium. Taxpayers are also paying millions of dollars to operate and maintain the stadium. The Packers call it an ideal partnership. But some say it's just not right.

It was a vote that divided the community. Voters had to choose between their pocketbooks and their Packers. Fifty-three percent of the people chose the Packers.

While everyone knew the sales tax would pay for the stadium project, many voters probably didn't know what else they were going to pay for.

"I would venture to say over 99% of the people who voted on this tax had no idea of what the extent of these operating expenses would be," said Richard Parins, president of the Brown County Taxpayers Association .

Your tax dollars go towards the Packers light bill, heating bill, water bill. We pay for people to shovel at the stadium. Another place your money goes: police officers and security guards on game day.

- Click here to read a detailed list of the expenses at Lambeau Field.

In fact, since the renovated stadium opened, taxpayers have paid $16 million of the sales tax to the Packers, to pay part of the costs of operating and maintaining the stadium.

"I think everybody's always in shock when they get the real numbers to what it costs to operate an entity like the Packers and the stadium," Parins said. The taxpayers association opposed the Lambeau plan from the start.

"It wasn't about the Packers," Parins said. "It was about taxpayers' monies being used to subsidize private businesses."

Parins maintains public funds should not be used to help a private business. The Packers argue that a private business should not be responsible for all of the costs associated with a public facility.

"We've always considered it a public asset," said Jason Wied, vice-president of administration for the Packers. "It's our home but it's not owned by the Green Bay Packers. It's owned by this community and we've treated it that way."

That's why the costs are shared, according to Wied.

"This shouldn't fall on the backs of one party to this agreement," Wied said. "So the discussion was how could we have a blend of people supporting the long term operation and maintenance of Lambeau Field."

Here's how that's done.

In 2009, the Packers received $9.9 million for operations and maintenance from the stadium district. That's the government board that acts as the landlord for Lambeau Field. The stadium district board allocates the money raised by the sales tax.

Of that $9.9 million, $6.4 million came from the ticket tax. Every time the Packers sell a ticket to the stadium, 10% of the price goes to pay for operations and maintenance.

Taxpayers chipped in $2.9 million from the sales tax.

$600,000 came from a combination of voluntary sources, including the sale of Packers license plates, commemorative bricks and tiles, and an income tax check off.

So where is our money going?

- $30,299.88 paid for internet access
- $144,522.08 was used for snow removal
- $890,235.03 was used to pay for police officers and fire fighters on game day
- $2,242,719.88 was spent on salaries and fringe benefits for facilities, security and cleaning staff
- $2,992,183.99 was spent on utilities

But those numbers don't tell the whole story.

"Actually our budget is much higher," Wied said.

The majority of the costs, $7.7 million, were paid directly by the Green Bay Packers. That's a point Parins readily admits.

"They are paying some of it," Parins said. "There's no question about that. It's always been described as a kind of partnership."

He just doesn't think taxpayers should be part of that partnership. For the Packers, it's an essential piece of the whole plan.

"We're pretty proud of the way it works and it is helpful to the Packers and we appreciate that partnership very much," Wied said.

The stadium district board reviews the maintenance work at the stadium and reviews the expenses, but only to make sure no money goes towards football operations. The amount of tax money the team gets from the district is set.

Those multi-million dollars payments will continue until the year 2031, but the tax will end well before that.

We'll have more on that Wednesday night.

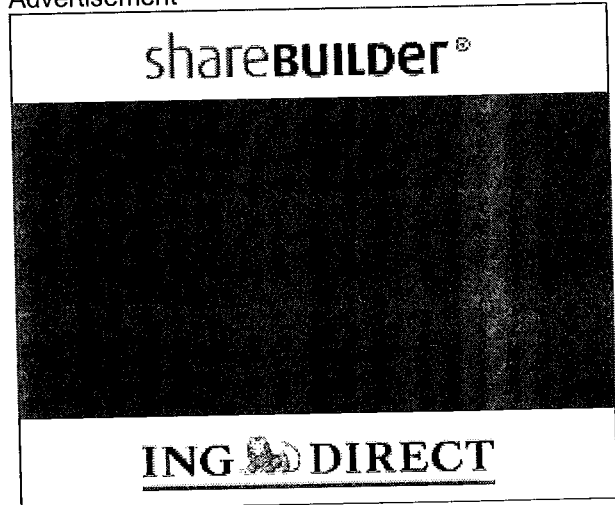

The Lambeau tax: Part 2

If the half percent sales tax was only paying for the stadium, the tax would end next year. But that's not how it was set up. Tax dollars also go to the Packers to operate Lambeau Field and do maintenance work on the stadium. Because of that, the tax will continue for another four or five years.

Remember when Lambeau Field used to look like a green, steel shed? Then came the Lambeau renovation plan. Voters narrowly approved a half percent sales tax to pay for most of the construction. What voters probably didn't know is what else they were going to pay for.

"I would venture to say over 99% of the people who voted on this tax had no idea of what the extent of these operating expenses would be," said Richard Parins, president of the Brown County Taxpayers Association .

Since the renovated stadium opened, taxpayers have paid $16 million of the sales tax to the Packers to pay part of the costs of operating and maintaining the stadium.

Your tax dollars go towards the Packers light bill, heating bill, water bill. We pay for people to shovel at the stadium. Another place your money goes: police officers and security guards on game day.

- Click here to read a detailed list of the expenses at Lambeau Field.

"It was always considered as part of the cost of doing the stadium project," said Jason Wied, vice-president of administration for the Packers.

The Packers call it a partnership. After all, the stadium is owned by the city. So it makes sense, the team argues, for taxpayers to pick up a portion of the costs.

"We've always considered it a public asset," Wied said. "It's our home but it's not owned by the Green Bay Packers it's owned by this community and we've treated it that way."

"This place is probably as well maintained as any facility in the country," said Pat Webb, executive director of the stadium district. That's the government board that acts as the landlord for Lambeau Field. The stadium district board allocates the money raised by the sales tax.

Webb estimates the bonds used to build the stadium will be paid off next summer. But the sales tax will keep going. That's because according to the law, the stadium district has to raise enough money to pay to operate and maintain the stadium through the year 2031. That's when the team lease with the stadium district and the city will expire.

Once the stadium is paid off, the stadium board will need to collect another $60 million to $80 million in sales tax. The exact amount is not known because of interest rates. The money will be set aside to help the Packers pay to operate and maintain Lambeau Field.

"That is going to add three to four years on to the sales tax after the retirement of the debt," Webb said. Based on Webb's calculations, we'll be paying the Lambeau tax until the year 2014 or 2015.

"Are taxpayers aware that these expenses are being pre-collected?" Parins asked. The taxpayers association opposed the Lambeau plan from the start.

"Our association has always felt it's not just a question of fairness, using taxpayer money to subsidize professional teams or professional interests like this is immoral," Parins said.

But the situation is unique. The Packers may be private but their stadium is public. While the taxpayer support helps the team's bottom line, it also helps the community keep up its biggest asset.

"It's certainly advantageous for us to have that in place but we also think it's advantageous for the people in Green Bay and the people that effectively own the stadium," Wied said.

The only way for the sales tax to continue would be if state law is changed. However, at any time the county could impose its own sales tax. We'll tell you more about that possibility Thursday night.

More than 10 years after the Packers unveiled the original Lambeau renovation plan, another plan is in the works. This time, it involves land owned by the Packers near the stadium. In the last three years, the team has purchased about 20 acres on the west-side of Lambeau, including the land where Kmart and Big Lots sit.

"We don't have any plans on the table right now," said Jason Wied, Packers vice-president of administration for the Packers.

Plans may not be on the table, but plenty of ideas are being discussed. Several sources who have seen the plans describe it as a Packers-themed village.

What might it include? Here's what we've been able find out:

How about a Packers hotel? Or go shopping in the shadow of Lambeau. Those sources say the Packers are trying to bring a major retail anchor to the area. Perhaps you want your office with a view of the stadium. Want your kids to play sports near the Packers? There could be a youth sports complex for that. You may be able to work out near Lambeau at a sports health facility.

Wied told FOX 11 the team is simply talking about ideas.

"It's waiting for the right idea," Wied said. "We'll know it when we see it and we can take steps forward at that point. But right now, we're just waiting to make sure it's the right idea."

Besides the land near the stadium, the Packers are considering a possible addition to the stadium. Seats and luxury boxes could be added in the south end zone, and more commercial space developed on the Oneida Street side of the stadium.

"We've considered opportunities for expanding the stadium and finding more space to get more people in for home games," Wied said. "It's just a thought process. We don't have any immediate plans to do those things. But it is something that we've talked about ever since the renovation."

The Packers have been meeting with local government officials in the last few months about possible development. Green Bay Mayor Jim Schmitt told FOX 11 one possibility is the creation of an economic development district around the stadium, which would include parts of Green Bay and Ashwaubenon.

"I think there's a whole Titledown district that could be created with new jobs, new businesses. I think there's great opportunity," Schmitt said.

While there may be opportunity, there are also a lot of questions, like how to pay for it. One of the things being looked at is the possibility of having a portion of a county sales tax help fund development near the stadium.

The half percent Brown County sales tax we pay now is for the renovation of Lambeau Field. It is expected to end in four or five years. At any point now or in the future, the county could put its own half percent sales tax in place.

Brown County Executive Tom Hinz denied our request for an on camera interview but told FOX 11 the sales tax idea has "been thrown out there."

But Hinz added, "To put another sales tax out right now? That won't happen."

"I think the public knows that I'm the last guy that's interested in subsidizing the Packers. Now, I don't have anything against the Packers," said Brown County board chairman Guy Zima. Zima has been in meetings with the Packers. He said he hasn't heard anything about tax money being used.

"All we know is they have contacted a lot of different businesses and they're looking to bring businesses in," Zima said. "They're interested in expanding their complex and if there's way to cooperatively work between the city, the county and Ashwaubenon to get some development, we're willing to look at it."

So whether it's a hotel, youth sports complex or sports health facility, if development happens, what do the Packers think of a possible county sales tax to fund it?

"We can only focus on the things we can control and what we can control is what happens with this stadium in connection with the city of Green Bay," Wied said. "So we haven't taken our focus off that in terms of economic development and things like that that's something for the county and village and city to focus on more so than us."

When asked whether the Packers are actively pursuing or lobbying for the county sales tax, Wied replied, "At this point the Packers are really focused on what's going to make sense for us to sustain ourselves for the next decades to come. So were mainly in the idea stage of getting concepts but we're certainly open to ideas that politicians have and the village and county and city have but that's as far as our discussions have gone on that."

The stadium district is doing an economic impact study for the land around Lambeau Field. Part of that study will look at the potential for development near the stadium. The study will be completed in March. The Packers say they have no timeline for when any plans will be made public.

Obama in State of Union: 'I don't quit'

Job growth will be president's top priority

Updated: Thursday, 28 Jan 2010, 4:36 PM CST

Declaring "I don't quit," President Barack Obama fought to recharge his embattled presidency with a State of the Union vow to get jobless millions back to work and stand on the side of Americans angry at Wall Street greed and Washington bickering.

Defiant despite stinging setbacks, he said he would fight on for ambitious overhauls of health care, energy and education.

"Change has not come fast enough," Obama acknowledged Wednesday night before a politician-packed House chamber and a TV audience of millions. "As hard as it may be, as uncomfortable and contentious as the debates may be, it's time to get serious about fixing the problems that are hampering our growth."

Obama looked to change the conversation from how his presidency is stalling — over the messy health care debate, a limping economy and the missteps that led to Christmas Day's barely averted terrorist disaster — to how he is seizing the reins. He spoke to a nation gloomy over double-digit unemployment and federal deficits soaring to a record $1.4 trillion, and to fellow Democrats dispirited about the fallen standing of a president they hoped would carry them through this fall's midterm elections.

With State of the Union messages traditionally delivered at the end of January, Obama had one of the presidency's biggest platforms just a week after Republicans scored an upset takeover of a Senate seat in Massachusetts, prompting hand-wringing over his leadership. With the turnover erasing Democrats' Senate supermajority needed to pass most legislation, it also put a cloud over health care and the rest of Obama's agenda.

Obama implored lawmakers to press forward with his prized health care overhaul, in severe danger in Congress. "Do not walk away from reform," he said. "Not now. Not when we are so close."

Republicans applauded the president when he entered the chamber and craned to welcomed Michelle Obama. But bipartisanship disappeared early, with Republicans sitting stone-faced through several rounds of emphatic Democratic cheering and as Obama took a sharp jab at GOP congressional strategy. "Just saying no to everything may be good short-term politics, but it's not leadership," he said.

The president devoted about two-thirds of his speech to the economic worries foremost on Americans' minds as recession persists. "The devastation remains," he said.

Obama emphasized his ideas, some new but mostly old and explained anew, for restoring job growth, taming budget deficits and changing a Washington so polarized that "every day is Election Day." Such roots of intense voter emotions once drove supporters to Obama but now are turning on him as he governs.

Declaring that "I know the anxieties" of Americans' struggling to pay the bills while big banks get bailouts and bonuses, Obama prodded Congress to enact a second stimulus package "without delay," urging that it contain help for small businesses and funding for infrastructure projects.

Subject: STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS
times are Eastern except where indicated.

We will schedule the State of the Union for 1 hour, and then slide all programming if it goes longer.

The White House has announced that President Obama will give his STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS at 9:00pm ET on WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27. FOX will carry the speech in its entirety plus the Republican response, LIVE in all time zones.

AMERICAN IDOL will now air at 8:00pm (ET/PT – see below for information by time zone) and the original episode of HUMAN TARGET previously scheduled to air at 8:00pm will move to TUESDAY, JANUARY 26 at 9:00pm.

STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS

- o On WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 27, from 9:00-cc ET, FOX will air the President's 2010 STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS, LIVE in all time zones.

FOX News will provide live coverage of the President's address, the Republican response and a brief analysis. In past years coverage of this event has lasted anywhere from 60-90 minutes. We anticipate a 90-minute program although FOX will not fill after 10pm ET, if the speech runs less than 90 min.

Stations in the Pacific time zone will return to local programming following the STATE OF THE UNION ADDRESS, and will air AMERICAN IDOL from 8:00-9:00pm. The 9:00-10:00pm hour is returned to local programming – see recap by time zone.
